

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

THE Index, of which the first portion appears in the present volume, forms part of a scheme to arrange in lexicographical order and print the references to all the Chancery suits for a period of about sixty-five years, which are contained in the several Series or Divisions of Chancery Proceedings, known by the names of one or other of the Six Clerks.

From the end of the reign of Charles I. to the end of that of Queen Anne, that is to say, from about 1649 to 1714 inclusive, the proceedings in Chancery are indexed in thirty-two manuscript volumes, the suits in each volume being roughly arranged under plaintiffs' names. Four of these volumes refer to the Division of Collins, six to that of Mitford, six to that of Reynardson, four to that of Whittington, six to that of Bridges and five to that of Hamilton, the last volume relating to a miscellaneous collection from all six Divisions.

The Indexes to Reynardson's Division have been first taken in hand, for the reason that it contains the smallest number of bundles, namely, 487, but, as the bundles vary much in size—some containing sixty suits only, and others as many as 150—it is not by any means certain that the aggregate number of suits here indexed is smaller than in any of the other Divisions.

The great expenditure of time necessary to go through these thirty-two volumes to find a suit which may be wanted, has no doubt prevented many persons from making extensive searches in this class of documents at the Public Record Office, and it may not be generally known that from these Chancery suits many a pedigree can be worked out in a most complete manner. In one suit alone, the compiler was able to trace the ascent of the litigants for no less than five generations, with many ramifications in each generation, and three or four generations is no uncommon find.

When the remaining Indexes of the Six Clerks' Series are printed, the search will be wonderfully simplified, so that a list of suits that has hitherto taken weeks (or even months) to get out, will be accomplished in as many hours.

To render the Introduction more complete, it only remains to ask information from any one taking an interest in these matters on two points: First, for names of the Six Clerks, or Clerks in Chancery as they were sometimes called, previous to Henry VIII.'s reign ; secondly, for reference to any print or drawing of the old house in Chancery Lane, opposite the present Public Record Office, where the Six Clerks' office for many years stood. The Incorporated Law Society now occupies this spot, and as this building was erected in or about 1829, reference to any sketch made previous to this date will be welcomed by the compiler.

The Crace and other collections of views of London, at the British Museum, have been examined, but with no satisfactory result.

In the following Index the Depositions are not included, they will be taken separately at some future time.

INTRODUCTION TO REYNARDSON'S PROCEEDINGS.

THE origin of the officers of the Court of Chancery, called "The Six Clerks," is exceedingly remote. They appear to have been, from the highest antiquity, the sworn officers of the Great Seal, as well as of the Court of Chancery.

They were, with regard to other clerks that came afterwards, the only officers upon the establishment of the Court. They were attendant, if not upon the King, certainly upon the Chancellor, and, with this functionary, resident in the King's Palace.

Burroughes, in his History of the Chancery, says, "The Chancellor and his clerks continued in the King's Palace until about 4 Edward III. (1331), and purveyance was made for them as part of the King's household until that date, when the Chancellor and the Society of Clerks were severed and ordered away from the Court". The exact date of their separation from the King's household would appear to have been 2 Edward III. (1328), for in the Close Roll m. 33d. of this date, we find that after delivery of the Great Seal to the King, by the Bishop of Ely (who was then the Chancellor), and then by the King to the Keeper of the Rolls of Chancery, Master Henry de Clyf, "the King willed and ordered that Master Henry (de Clyff) shall keep an inn for the Clerks of Chancery and for the Officers of the same".

About this time there seems to have been a rearrangement of the officers of the Chancery, some being assigned to the Chancellor, while others to the Keeper of the Rolls and the Clerks in Chancery, together with the clerks of the Petty Bag and the Examiner of Patents, were assigned to the latter. Up to this time it would appear that there were but three Clerks in Chancery, but by an Ordinance or Regulation, made 12 Richard II. (1388), the number was increased to six, from which time (except for a short period during the Commonwealth, hereafter to be mentioned) till the time of their abolition (5 Victoria, 1842), they were always known as the Six Clerks in Chancery.

It is probable that until the above-mentioned division of the Chancery officers between the Chancellor and the Keeper of the Rolls, the appointment of the Clerks was made by the King ; but it is very clear that for several centuries previous to their abolition, the power of appointment was vested in the Keeper or Master of the Rolls, the office being a freehold one, and three guineas being paid as admission fee.

The Six Clerks were required to take an oath of fidelity, which was instituted by an Act of 13 & 14 Edward III. c. 5 (1340), (Bladon, fo. 7, says, 18 Edward III.), which was as follows, and was the same as that taken by the Master of the Rolls.

“Ye shall swere that well and lawfully ye shall serve our Lord the King and his people in the office of Clerk of the Chancery to wch ye be attitled and ye shall not assent to nor procure the King's Disherition nor perpetual damage to yr power, nor ye shall do nor procure to be done any fraud to any man's wrong nor thing that toucheth the keeping of the Seal. And ye shall lawfully give Counsell in the things that toucheth the King when ye shall be thereunto required And the Counsell wch ye know touching him ye shall conceal And if ye know the King's disherition or ppetuall Damage or fraud to be done upon the things wch touch the Keeping of the Seals Ye shall put yr lawfull power to repress and amend it And if ye cannot doe it then ye shall certifie the Chancellor or other wh may do the same to be amended to your intent.”

The following oath was taken by them in 1614, as appears in the Lansdown MSS., No. 163, fo. 82 :—

30th December, 1614.

“Yee shall swere that well and trulye yee shall serve the King and his people in the office of one of the Six Clerks of the Chancery whereunto ye be admitted and will justly order yourself in the same according to your lerning and truly counsell them that yee shall be reteyned with And yee shalbe diligent to further the Kinges business from tyme to tyme as neede shall require And yee shall not assent to any fraude or disceipt to be had or donne by you or by your consent in any of the King's Records whereunto yee shall have recourse But well and truly yee shall intreate the same And ye shall not absent yourself willingly whereby the Kings business or any other shalbe undonne or hindered without special license of the Master of the Rolls or his Deputie for the tyme beinge as God you help.”

On his entry to office it was customary for the newly-appointed Clerk to give a dinner and a supper, usually costing £20, but, in 1575, this was considered a matter of great excess and ostentation, and not necessary, and it was commuted for a payment of £6 13s. 6d., with which to purchase new napery and for the renewing of vessels and other necessities of the Six Clerks.

One fact connected with the Six Clerks, previous to Henry VIII.'s reign, was that they were not allowed to marry. It had been a long-established custom that every officer of the Court of Chancery (except the Clerk of the Crown) should be unmarried. If any disregarded this custom they forfeited their office. This custom dates, no doubt, from the time when they were in priest's orders (as their name implies), and when they were subject to all the restraints which the Church of Rome imposed, though participating in the rights and privileges of ecclesiastics. But, by an Act 14 & 15 Henry VIII., cap. 8 (1522-23), they obtained leave to take wives and marry.

The recitals in this Act are most plaintive, and set forth that though many officers of the Court of Chancery had married and yet retained their office, they (the Clerks) required legal sanction to their desires.

The names of the Six Clerks then in office are given in the Act, and were John Trevethan, Richard Wells, Oliver Leader, John Croke, William Jessen and John Lensey, and, no doubt, they soon took advantage of the license given them.

It would seem, also, that in Henry VIII.'s time, the Six Clerks were required to ask leave of the Master of the Rolls when they wished to go out of town. Nor were the emoluments of the office very great, judging from the fact that one of them, Richard Wells, who lived at Ware, used to come to London afoot at the beginning of the Term. But within the next hundred years, when Lord Coventry was Lord Keeper, in 1625, the office had become very valuable, and was sold in one instance for £6,000.

In 1654, Oliver Cromwell abolished the office of Six Clerks and substituted Three Chief Clerks (as before, in Richard III.'s reign), with sixty "Sworn" Clerks under them, and the Appellation of "Sixty Clerks" became general. But, as no compensation was made on the abolition of this freehold office, it was met—as was natural—by a determined resistance on the part of the Commissioners of the Great Seal, and the ordinance was eventually repealed, and, in 1656 or thereabouts, things resumed their former state.

In 31 Henry VIII. (1539), the Six Clerks were incorporated as a body politic. Their rank as officers of the Court of Chancery was declared to be next in order to the Clerks of the Privy Council, as appears by a certificate, dated 20th February, 1633, under Seal of the Heralds College, signed by Sir John Burroughs, Knight, Garter King of Arms.

In ancient times the Six Bachelors, as they then were, had all the business to themselves, but soon needed help, and engaged "Under Clerks". By degrees, these Under Clerks usurped the effective management of the business, and became the recognised officers of the Court, though they had no established scale of fees, being paid by the Six Clerks. In 1668, they were constituted "Sworn Clerks" with fixed fees, and provision was made that on a vacancy in the Six Clerks, persons who had served for at least seven years as "Sworn Clerks," were eligible for the post. The number of "Sworn Clerks" varied at different periods, but, eventually, in 1668, they were limited to ten to each Six Clerk by whom they were nominated, but power was reserved to the Master of the Rolls to admit them on his own initiative, if he so desired. The Sworn Clerks (or Clerks in Court, as they came to be called), as their name implies, had to take an oath similar to that of the Six Clerks, which, however, was rather more comprehensive in its terms.

Besides the Sworn Clerks there were others called "Waiting Clerks," limited to two for each Six Clerk, but it is not quite certain what precise position they held, but probably they were supernumeraries waiting for a vacancy among the Sworn Clerks.

Besides all these there was the office of "Riding Clerk," who looked after the King's interests in patents, writs and commissions, keeping an account of the grants which passed the Great Seal and attending His Majesty in Council with Sheriffs Rolls, etc.

The Riding Clerk was one of the Six Clerks who took the above-named duties in rotation for a year, and received extra fees in consequence.

As may be surmised, where a lucrative business (such as that of the Six Clerks and their attendants) was a monopoly, abuses crept in, and much inconvenience was caused to the suitors and the public, and justice thereby delayed. The Six Clerks neglected to give certificates to set down causes, records were lost, mislaid, or stolen, and it would even appear that clerks were committed to the Fleet for criminally disposing of records or tampering with depositions and counterfeiting writs of subpœna. This condition of things was, however, eventually dealt with by an order, dated 18th July, 1666, and some of the most glaring abuses put down.

But there were also internal dissensions between the Sworn Clerks and their superiors the Six Clerks, and, in 1658, things came to a crisis, for in that year the latter took away the seats, desks, books and papers that were in the Public Office, and posted up a declaration forbidding the Sworn Clerks to appear in Court.

These disputes, or most of them were, however, patched up for a time, but, in 1668, a further outbreak occurred, for it seems the Sworn Clerks behaved in a most indecent manner, and threw dirt, filth and ink about the Court, abused their masters—the Six Clerks—and made loud outcries and noises with the flaps of their desks, thus preventing the transaction of any business. The complaint of the Sworn Clerks was to the effect that the Six Clerks had permitted unauthorised persons to practise without being sworn, had turned off the regular clerks, and had employed persons to copy the documents, etc., at low rates, who were neither articulated, educated nor employed in the office.

This alarming state of affairs continued off and on for several years, but was finally ended by an inquiry and an order, in 1693, which regulated the duties of the Sworn Clerks. Thus, peace was restored, and from that time to the date of the abolition of the Six Clerks, in 1842, there were no more outbreaks.

It will now be interesting to inquire into what were the duties of the Six Clerks. In the times of Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, they were spoken of as being the only Attorneys of the Court of Chancery. They acted, in fact, as the official medium between solicitors and the Court.

They received and filed all Bills, Answers, Replications and other Records in all cases on the Equity side of the Court of Chancery, and entered memorandums of them in books, from which they certified to the Court, when required, the state of proceedings in causes. They signed all copies of pleadings made by the Sworn Clerks and Waiting Clerks, after seeing that the originals were regularly filed. After each term they presented to be set down the causes ready for hearing in the ensuing term.

They likewise attended in term time to read such documents as were ordered to be read in causes. They examined and signed dockets of decrees and dismissions prepared for enrolment, and saw that the records and orders were fully filed and entered, which they certified previous to signature by the Lord Chancellor or Vice-Chancellor, or the Master of the Rolls.

As to the systems adopted at various times to file and keep in order the vast accumulation of Bills, Answers and Depositions under the charge of the Six Clerks, there are recorded at least two. About 1635, the business of the office was divided thus: suits in which the first Plaintiffs' name began with letters A, B, F and Y, were apportioned to two of the Six Clerks; letters E, G to O, to two others; and letters P to X and Z to the remaining two; but eventually the sworn clerk attached to any particular Six Clerk filed the Bills, etc., in all their suits with his Six Clerk, apparently without reference to the alphabetical order above mentioned.

It will be interesting to place on record the instructions for filing Bills, etc., adopted later on, drawn up by one of the Six Clerks themselves. They are to be found in Vol. II. of the Index to Proceedings in Chancery, 1714-1758, Reynardson's Division, and though in the quaint language and spelling of the time, are so clear and detailed that no further remarks are necessary.

THE METHOD OF FILING AND KEEPING BILLS, ANSWERS AND DEPCONS, DRAWN UP BY MR. REYNARDSON.

When a Bill is brought into the Office the fitte Sollr. carry's it to any one of the sworne Clerks or waiting Clerks or waiting Clerks (sic) he thinks proper; who is then called the plts Clerk in Court, and such sworne or waiting Clerk ought imediately to put the day of the month and year upon the bill, and carry it into his Six Clerks study, who enters the Name of the plts and Defts in a book (Called the law book) kept by him in an alphabeticall manner; and then the Six Clerk writes his Sir Name upon the top of the Bill and puts it in a file in his study and from this time such Six Clerk is and continues the Six Clerk for the Plte in such cause, notwithstanding any change of the sworne Clerk or Sollicitors, and if any abatemt of suit happens by death of Plte or Deft or otherwise and a bill of revr. of the former suit is brought, it ought to be filed with the first Six Clerk in manner before mentioned, that the records in the same cause may be together, and that one Six Clerk may be enabled from time to time to certify to the Court the state of the proceedings in each cause. When the Defts Sollrs come to enter an appearance they retain such one or more of the sworn Clerks as each Deft thinks proper. The sworne Clerk writes the name renoted of the cause, his own Six Clerks name (or any other of the Six Clerks names he thinks proper if his own Six Clerk happens to be for the Plte) and his own name, this note he delivers to the Six Clerk for the Plte and takes the Bill from the file and gives a rect for it in a book kept for ye purpose, and the Six Clerk from the note enters the name of the Deft's Six Clerk and sworne Clerk in his Cause book over against the entry by him before made of the Plts and Defts names, and this discharges the Plts Six Clerk of such Bill.

The Bill then remains possion of the Defts Clerk in Court untill an answer is put in thereto, when the bill and answer are affixed together and ought immediately to be carried into that Six Clerk's Study in whose name the Deft appeared, and such Six Clerk enters the name of the plts and such of the Defts as are mentioned in the answer, together with the day of the month and year in his Cause book, signs his name to each skin of the answer and then delivers bill and answer together to the Plts Six Clerk, who, if the answer is properly taken and signed immediately, enters the name of the Deft who answers and the day of the month and year in the same part of the Cause book where [he] had before written the parties names from the Bill.

The Answer being thus entered is said to be filed, and during the Terme it came in the bill and answer together lye open upon a table in the plts Six Clerk's Study, from whence the Plts Clerk in Court takes the same to copy the answer, but first gives the Six Clerk a rect for the same and when the answer is copied it ought to be returned into this Study of the Six Clerks for the Plte, and amongst the records of the Terme in which the answer was filed.

At the end of every Terme the records of yt Terme are bundled up by each Clerk's record Keeper and a lable of the Terme affixed thereto. The single Bills to which no appearance is entered by themselves, and Bills and Answers in another bundle, and were the records returned to the Six Clerks according to the orders of Court when copied by the Sworne Clerks and put into the bundle of records of the Terme when filed, the Six Clerks books would be an exact Index or Calendar to the Records, and any Record would be found with ease.

When the Defts have answered, if the Plte wod replye thereto, his Clerk in Court carrys a replication (to all or either of the Defts answers) to the Six Clerk for the Plts, who enters the names of Defts replied to in his Cause book where the first entry made, and puts the Day of the month and year on the replication and in his book, then signs the replication and carrys it to the Deft Six Clerk who makes the like entry and puts the replication upon a file in his study where the same remains. From these entrys the Six Clerks are enabled (when required) to certify to the Court the state of Proceedings in every Cause so far as relate to the time of filing bill, answers or replication.

When Witnesses are examined by Comicon in the Country, such Comicon when returned into Court, ought by the orders of the Court to be delivered to the Six Clerk of the party who sued out such Comicon or his Deputy, to be safely and secretly kept and unopened till pubcon is duely passt, when the same ought to be opened in the presence of such Six Clerk or his Deputy, and delivered to the Clerk in Court to be copied, and all records when copied ought immediately to be re^d [returned] to the Six Clerk from whom the same was rec'd, and all copys of records when made should be brought to the Six Clerk to be signed before the same are delivered out to any Client.

This is the method prescribed by the Orders of Court for the due filing, Keeping and copying of records and which the Six Clerks observe to the utmost of their power, but are not so well observed on the part of the Sworne and Waiting Clerks, by which it is apprehended many inconveniences arise, not only to the Suitors but to the Officers of the Court.

First as to Single Bills. These are taken out by the Clerk in Court who first appears for any or either of the Defts, who makes a copy of it but never returns it to the Six Clerk, but instead thereof delivers it over to any other sworne or waiting Clerk who appears for any other Deft, by which means such other Clerk copys, and if no answer happens to be filed by such last Sworn or Waiting Clerks, his Six Clerk never comes to the knowledge of the Copyes made by him, by which means the Six Clerk is deprived of his fees for such copy, and the Bill remains in the Custody of a Clerk whose name does not appear in the Six Clerks books so as to charge him with the record of the Bill, but the same when wanted is [? has] to be traced from one Sworn or waiting Clerk to another, Whereas if the record of the Bill was to be returned by the Sworn Clerk who first took [it] to the Six Clerk from whom the same was rec'd, and the like method observed by every Clerk who appears for any Deft, as is by the Sworne or Waiting Clerk who first takes the Bill to copy, the Bill, in case of no answer filed, would remain in the Terme Bundle in which it was filed and the Six Clerk would be enabled to know how many copies of such bill was made.

2ndly as to answers. They are frequently copied before they are filed and by that means often not filed at all, for by copying the answers before filed, the Six Clerk, who (in case the answer was filed) would have been entitled to a copy, has not an opportunity of charging the Plts Clerk in Court with such copy, and in case the Cause is not like to be proceeded in such answers often remain unfiled.

Such answers as are regularly filed the Plts Clerk in Court takes from the Pts Six Clerk and puts into the same Term bundle from whence taken; but this method not being observed it occasions great confusion amongst the records; for it frequently happens yt answers when copied by the Pts Clerk in Court are not returned to the Six Clerk in many years, and by this means such answers are never put into the proper term Bundles, But in case of the death of such Clerk in Court his records are delivered to his Six Clerk, but not in the order or method observed by the Six Clerks in keeping their records, so that the Six Clerks can only take an alphabetical list of such records and this occasions the records in the Six Clerks record rooms to be under two different heads, one entituled Study Matters and the other Pleadings.

The first Class [i.e., Study Matters] are such records as are by the Six Clerks respectively sent out of their offices or Studys into the record rooms, and which is for the most part so contrived as to have always the records of 5 Terms in their Studys, so that were the records that are copied by [them] returned before the end of 5 terms the inconveniences wch arise from their not being returned to the Six Clerks would be avoided, and should any one have occasion to search for a record in any Cause at any distance of time, if the Ptf's name and the terme when the Cause began was but known, the Plts Six Clerks book would immediately show in what Term bundle any particular bill, answer or other record was remaining.

But as great number of records are never, or at least not in many years, returned to the Six Clerks, if any occasion to resort to any such records the first step to be taken is to search the Cause book of the Six Clerk [who] was concerned for the Plte, where is to be found what answers have been filed and the perticular (sic) term when filed, then searches to be made into that Term bundle for the Perticular record wanted, (and which if regularly returned would be there to be found), but not being to be found there, search must be again made in the Six Clerks books of Delivery of Records to see what Clerk in Court took such answer to copy ; if the same person who took out such answer be then in the office the answer may be found without any great difficulty, but if it happen to be a record of long standing that is wanted it may happe yt the Plte has severall times changed his Clerk in Court or his (sic) the seat of such Clerk may have several times changed its owner, and in such case a record is to be found with great difficulty, if at all.

This is the case when a record [is taken] out by a clerk in the division of the Pts Six Clerk, but as Plts often change their Clerk in Court, it frequently happens that a record is taken from the Six Clerk by a clerk who comes in to the Cause for the Plte who is neither in the Division of the Plts or Defts Six Clerk; this occasions a greater inconvenience still, for in case of the death of such last mentioned Clerk in Court his records are, or ought to be possessed by his Six Clerk, and never come back to the Six Clerk who was concerned in the Cause, in which case yy are scarce ever to be found.

3rdly Comicons to examine with Interrys and Depositions taken thereon never come to the hands of the Six Clerk, either before or after publication, notwithstanding the several orders for yt purpose, unless in the case of a death of a Clerk in Court. And what is most extraordinary altho Depositions seem to be of the greatest consequence they do not so much as appear in any of the Six Clerks books, nor are the records thereof ever signed with Six Clerks name as other records are, and unless the Cause wherein such depositions are taken is set down to be heard, the Six Clerks have no knowledge of the Copys (sic) thereof and are deprived of their fees for the same. And there are great numbers of Depositions in Causes which never come to be heard, Depons and Examinations in Causes after hearing, which not being brought to the Six Clerk according to the orders of the Court the Six Clerks are deprived of their fees for the Copys thereof.

It will be seen from the foregoing method of filing Bills, etc., that the suits frequently got terribly mixed up, and it is impossible now to follow the course of any particular suit in its tedious travel through Chancery by a mere inspection of the Index, and it is necessary, should a Bill or Answer not be found in the Division of the Six Clerk with whom it was first filed, to continue the search from Division to Division of the remaining Clerks. It must also be remembered that the title of the suit was often varied according to the particular Defendant making answer.

All this, however, will be wonderfully simplified when the other Six Clerks' Indexes are printed.

In addition to the duties as Clerks in Chancery they had others in connection with their office as Comptrollers of the Hanaper, namely, to receive certain revenues of the Crown, made payable to the Clerk of the Hanaper, and to pay thereout certain annuities, salaries and allowances.

They also enrolled the Warrants for grants which passed the Great Seal, and wrote and engrossed Letters Patent nominating the Sheriffs for England and Wales, appointed yearly by the Privy Council, with the writs incident thereto, and they had the custody of the Sheriffs' Rolls.

They were also the nominal attorneys in all causes depending in the Petty Bag Office, and it was their duty to enter in a book all rules in Causes given by the Clerks of the Petty Bag.

It is not altogether to be wondered at that, with such an accumulation of duties, justice was tardy and suitors became impatient, aggravated as it was by somewhat extortionate fees, and at length it became necessary to devise more expeditious, and less costly, methods. Accordingly, in order gradually to dissolve the office, it was decreed by Act 3 & 4 William IV. (1833), that future vacancies in the office of Six Clerks should not be filled up until the number should have been reduced to two, and finally by Act 5 & 6 Victoria (1842), their duties were divided and taken over by the Clerks of Records and Writs, the Clerk of Enrollments and the Clerk of the Petty Bag, under whose care the business continued till 1889, when the Petty Bag office was abolished and other arrangements were made for carrying on the business of the Court of Chancery.

We will now describe the places where the Six Clerks in Chancery carried on their business. As already stated, they were originally attendant on the King or his Chancellor, and were resident in the King's Palace (and probably accompanied him on any of his travels about the Kingdom).

In 2 Edward III. (1328), as we have seen, an Inn was assigned to them. The Close Roll does not particularly specify where this Inn was, but it may be presumed to be the same that they were occupying at the time of their Incorporation, in 31 Henry VIII. (1539), namely, Harflu's Inn in Chancery Lane.

This Inn, in 32 Henry VI. (1453), was the property of Nicholas Wymbyssh, clerk, who was at that time a Master in Chancery, and on 8th February of that year he had license to grant to the Prior and Convent of Nocton Park, in the County of Lincoln, "one messuage with the appurtenances in a Street called Chauncery Lane, in the Parish of St. Dunstan, Fletstrete, in the suburb of London, which is held of us (the King) in free burbage and which is extended to forty and six shillings and eight pence by the year" in augmentation of their sustenance (Patent Roll, No. 478, 32 Henry VI. m. 13).

This message and its appurtenances, by an Inquis. ad quod dam., taken on Friday next before the Feast of the Blessed Virgin Mary of the same year, was found not to be to the damage or prejudice of the King for Nicholas Wymbyssh to give and assign to the Prior and Convent of Nocton Park. (Inquis. ad quod dam., 32 Henry VI., No. 31.)

We next hear of Harflu's Inn in Henry VIII.'s reign, when the lesser monasteries began to be suppressed, for amongst the many estates granted to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, and Katharine his wife, were Nocton Park, together with a message and tenements in Chauncery Lane. (Patent Roll, No. 684, 30 Henry VIII., seventh part, m. 17 and 21.)

By an Act of Parliament, dated 28th April, 31 Henry VIII. (1539), (Certiorari Bundle No. I., No. 7), the Six Clerks were incorporated and enabled to hold property in their own right, and "the message in Chauncery Lane of old time, named Harflu Inne, now being in the holding or occupation of the Six Clerks of the Kings High Court of Chancery," and which the said Duke and Duchess "were content to depart with to the Six Clerks," was handed over to the newly-created corporate body of the Six Clerks.

The situation of Harflu's Inne can fairly well be determined from several sources. Ogilby and Morgan's map of London, 1677, shows the Six Clerks office exactly opposite the Rolls Chapel, and "over against the Rolls" is a usual expression in speaking of it. Stowe's Survey of London, Vol. III., p. 263, and Maitland's History of London, (1775), p. 977, both concur in saying that:—

"On the West side of Chancery Lane was some time a House belonging to the Prior of Nocton Park, a House of Canons in Lincolnshire. This was commonly called Hereflete Inn and was a brew house, but now built for the Six Clerks of the Chancery, and stands over against the house called the Rolls and near unto the lane which entered Fickets cross or Fickets field" (now Carey Street).

It would appear probable, therefore, that the Law Institute now occupies the site of the building which was for many centuries the Six Clerks office.

In this building they remained till 1621, when, a fire occurring, it was entirely destroyed with many of the records stored there.

A more substantial one was built entirely of brick on the same site, with separate rooms and lodgings for each of the Six Clerks, besides several rooms therein vaulted over with brick for the safe keeping of the records. The cost of this building was £6,000, and provision was made for recouping the outlay by levying a tax of £300 on every future incoming Six Clerk until the amount was cleared off.

In course of time this building became too small for the increasing business in Chancery, and unfitted for the safe custody of the Records. Hence Parliamentary powers were obtained, 1774 (14 George III.), authorising its sale or rebuilding, and providing funds for the purpose.

Upwards of £5,000 was then set aside for the purchase of a site and for the erection of offices, and by an Act of the following year, land in Chancery Lane on the west side, nearer to Holborn, and till then forming a portion of the gardens of Lincoln's Inn, was selected as preferable.

The building "over against the Rolls" and the ground was disposed of, and the purchase money paid into the Bank, the annual income whereof being paid to the Six Clerks in compensation for the loss of their residential chambers and for the repair of the building they occupied till 1842.

This building, it may be remarked, was most substantially built, and the arches of its Record room were strong enough to bear almost any superincumbent weight, and the whole material was of the best quality. In fitting up the present Royal Courts of Justice, much of the oak wood-work of this building was used for desks, seats, etc.

The Six Clerks took possession of the new building in Trinity Vacation, 1778, and there they continued till the abolition of their office in 1842, when, as before stated, their duties were transferred to the Clerks of Records and Writs, whose name might, till quite recently (1898), have been still discovered (but nearly obliterated by dirt and dust) over the doorway. On the erection of the Royal Courts of Justice in the Strand, their business was transferred there.

The upper part of this building is now used as a School of Arms for the Inns of Court Royal Volunteers, and the lower part as a lumber room.

Little more remains to be said about the Six Clerks beyond giving their names and dates of appointment. (See end of Introduction.)

As at present arranged, the Six Clerks documents are known to searchers under the names of Brydges, Collins, Hamilton, Mitford, Reynardson and Whittington. As will be seen by the list, these Six were in office together between the years 1738 and 1747, and probably at some period between these years the documents were sorted and Indexes made.

We have, however, the information from the Six Clerks themselves (First Report on Public Records, 1800, p. 106), that :—

"On the removal of the office to the Holborn end of Chancery Lane, in 1778, the records were re-sorted with much labour and pains and put into complete order according to years, and new Calendars made thereof in which order they have been well preserved ever since."

Again, in the Second Report of the Deputy-Keeper, 1840, p. 74, the Assistant-Keeper at the Tower (where the Records of the Six Clerks and other documents were preserved till the erection of the present Public Record Office) reports that "These documents are divided into six divisions bearing the names of the Six Clerks in Chancery at the time they were sorted".

Within recent years two (Mitford and Reynardson) of the six sets of records have been checked, and each suit separately numbered so that very little time is lost in searching for any particular document.

It is difficult to ascertain precisely the total number of suits in these Indexes (which it must be remembered embrace only the period 1649-1714), but Bridges contains—640 Bundles

Collins	610	„
Hamilton	671	„
Mitford	658	„
Reynardson	487	„
Whittington	546	„
Total	3612

and reckoning on an average of seventy suits in a bundle, we get a total of over 250,000 suits which is probably not far from the mark.
